A call from WAVE to collaborate on PrEP for women

WAVE would like advocate for an online resource on PrEP and women. From our experience, we know that broaching the topic of HIV risk with women can be challenging and an online platform might provide a useful tool for clinicians, especially for those less confident in discussing HIV. We are looking to work with groups who may already be providing online tools for women seeking PrEP or which can augment healthcare services seeking to support women at risk of HIV acquisition. WAVE could support the development of information for and identification of women who need PrEP, but also can help to address stigma, which can be a major obstacle for seeking PrEP.

Standard of Care for HIV and Coinfections in Europe

This year, the Standard of Care for HIV and Coinfections in Europe will be organised as a hybrid event. It will consist of plenaries and workshops. The main topics are:

- Data from standards of care initiatives – Analysis and debate
- HIV and COVID-19 coinfection
- Barriers to PrEP delivery
- HIV and comorbidities – Implementing services for the ageing HIV-infected individual

The meeting will start on 22 October and is on invitation only.

PentaTr@ining 2020: ‘HIV & other Congenital Infections’

‘PentaTr@ining’ is an interactive course that continues to develop and evolve in response to the changing needs of children living with HIV and other congenital infections. This year’s online course, beginning on 2 November, will be highly interactive and clinical case-based, designed to kindle engagement and encourage intercommunication among the students and faculty team. It will consist of 6 weekly modules (about 90-120 minutes long), with associated pictures, infographics, tables and figures, references, and links to major PID websites of interest. EACS members can access the course at a discounted Early Bird rate before 25 September 2020.
